The emerging dance/pop artist and soccer coach, Amiko, is making waves in the music industry with her single "Reckless," which recently reached number 7 on the prestigious UK Music Week Commercial Pop Club Chart. This success is due, in part, to remixes by prominent DJs such as Sean Finn and Klubjumpers, which propelled the song through the charts in the United Kingdom and France, where it reached #3 on the Le Buzz Chart, placing ahead of artists like Eminem and Billie Eilish. The collaboration behind "Reckless" has been key to its success. Amiko co-wrote the track alongside Grammy-winning producer Carlos Battey (also known as Jackie's Boy), who is known for working with major stars like Madonna and Justin Bieber. With over 430,000 streams on Spotify, the remixes of "Reckless" continue to capture the attention of a global audience. "It is an honor to have the lead vocals and to co-write 'Reckless' with Carlos Battey," Amiko comments. "I am excited to have a global audience for my original music thanks to this collaboration."

Expanding Horizons on the Radio and Her First Interview

The Klubjumpers remix of "Reckless" is currently playing on six regional radio stations in the United States, and Amiko is also preparing for her first interview on Splash 98.5 FM in New Jersey with Melissa Bonilla. This showcases the reach she has achieved in such a short time, driven by her vocal ability and catchy lyrics that easily connect with listeners.

A Life Dedicated to Soccer and Dreams on the World Cup Stage

Amiko has not only managed to shine in music, but she is also passionate about soccer, having coached youth players in Dallas, Texas, for more than 12 years. With extensive background in soccer coach education in collaboration with North Texas Soccer, she dedicates her time to inspiring youth at all levels, from grassroots development to advanced competition. This duality between music and sports is something that defines Amiko, who aims to perform live at the FIFA World Cup in 2026 at the AT&T Stadium in Arlington, Texas. For Amiko, this would be the culmination of her passion for music and soccer, paying tribute to all those who share a love for "the beautiful game." With this promising music career and her roots in sports, Amiko is delivering a message of empowerment and passion, proving that it is possible to live multiple dreams with dedication and love for what you do and she has also dedicated her life to raising awareness and fundraising for pediatric cancer patients and their families!
